South Africa.
Official publications of the "Union of South Africa" are entered under the above heading.
Under the "South Africa Act" of 1909, the self-governing colonies of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange River Colony were united, May 31, 1910, in a legislative union, under one government, as the "Union of South Africa." Those colonies became provinces under the union, and the Orange River Colony resumed a former name, Orange Free State.
Subject heading for South Africa is "Africa, South," according to the regional treatment adopted for Africa, e. g. "Africa, British East"; "Africa, Central"; etc.; "Africa, South-west."

South Carolina agricultural society.
There have been the following state agricultural societies in South Carolina, with headquarters in Columbia:
1818. South Carolina agricultural society.
1826. United agricultural society of South Carolina.
1839. State agricultural society of South Carolina.
1855. State agricultural society of South Carolina.
1869. South Carolina agricultural and mechanical society (later, State agricultural and mechanical society of South Carolina)
These societies are all entered under the name of the state, followed by the name of the particular society. The society founded in 1869 is still active.
The Agricultural society of South Carolina (founded 1785) with headquarters at Charleston, is not a state society, and is entered under its name.
